FROM OUR DEAN

I have just been reading an interesting article in The Saturday Review entitled The Healer and The Scientist. The author traces the development of the art of medicine particularly in the past four decades. The forces that have changed the doctor have been, first, the fact that medical schools have become an integral part of universities; secondly, the establishment of full-time professorships; and third, the opportunity for research. The application of this statement to our profession and to our own school is obvious. It is recognized that the establishment of YSN has been of untold benefit to nursing and to nurses. Since 1923 other university schools of nursing have grown and flourished. We welcome them as great assets in the advancement of nursing and at the same time we recognize that they can give us healthy competition. By no means can we rest on our historical laurels. We should by now, I believe, expect our faculty, students and graduates to carry on research, particularly in the area of nursing care, to a greater degree than is true at the present time. The choice of this topic as the subject for Alumnae Day is a timely one. When the Annie W. Goodrich Professorship becomes a reality, not only will added stimulus be given to research, but it should help also in clarifying the questions of academic rank, tenure and status which are now matters of real concern.

OTHER NOTES

Elleanor Hall, Associate Professor, who has been on the YSN faculty since 1948, was recently made Assistant Dean. As the Dean says, "Same girl—same job—but as she has been acting in this capacity for several years it seemed only fair to recognize the fact with the appropriate title."

Many at YSN received Christmas greetings from Mrs. E. Margolit Kochin, Hadasah School of Nursing in Jerusalem, Israel. She was a Rockefeller Fellow at Yale last year.

Nursing Research for October 1953 featured an article by Frances Thielbar '33, "Administrative Organization of Collegiate Schools of Nursing."

After living for two years in Colombo, Ceylon, Doris Connor Oremus '44, and her husband are now located in Singapore, Malaya. She is learning to speak Malayan and sends a snapshot of herself astride an elephant. In Colombo she taught a class in home nursing for the St. John's Ambulance Brigade (like our Red Cross).

Ethel Barach '52 has been appointed a director on the Board of YSNAA to fill the unexpired term of Grace Nichols Knight '43, whose husband is the newly elected president of Lawrence College, Wisconsin, succeeding Nathan Pusey, now President of Harvard University.
